Appendix 3: The Structure of the Website

This demonstrates the main information sections (on the left hand menu). The topics under the curriculum section include important curriculum content considerations, (see Figure 2) with introductions, case studies, ideas for curriculum inclusion, and additional resources.

Curriculum design, content and organisation provide the hub for opportunities to develop employability attributes, skills, knowledge and understandings in our students. The website brings together a wide range of resources and information for ideas, examples, models of good practice, including case studies that relate to employability in the curriculum.

We would welcome more examples of good practice to further enhance and develop the resources as an ongoing basis. Please contact James Cash with examples of practice that you have used successfully and/or additional resources you have located, or any other helpful comments and inputs.
Implementing Bournemouth University’s Employability Strategy in the Subject Areas of Hospitality, Leisure, Sport and Tourism

Figure 3: Teaching Learning and Assessment
This section, using the same headings of introduction, embedding in the curriculum, case study examples and additional resources, offers a range of ideas and examples for developing skills and attributes through the teaching and learning process.

Student support offers insights and innovative ideas with examples drawn from experiential practice by staff on Peer Assisted Learning, approaches to student tutoring and inductions.

Co-curricular services include contributions from the Students’ Union and Careers. The Students’ Union section focuses on the opportunities offered to students for involvement in extra-curricular activities and encourages staff to integrate the learning from these into their teaching and learning. The Students’ Union is extremely supportive of this initiative and actively promotes the importance of employability, and in particular PDP, to the student body.

Additional Resources
Links to key resources which have been carefully researched and selected are included. There are direct links from the main page to the different Higher Education Academy Subject Centres and their contents, links to the employability section of the Higher Education Academy, The Learning & Employability Series Publications (ESECT), Employability Briefings (ESECT) etc. In addition, an electronic Talis reading list has been developed which draws together all our library resources on aspects of employability.
